

Colloquium – New Philologies, the Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt, and The Alps-Adriatic-Rectors' Conference (AARC)

present the 3rd AARC Conference

Language.Literature.Politics.

1918-2018. (Un)doing Nationalism and Resistance

Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt, Austria – September 20-22, 2018

Second Call for Papers

The Open Access journal Colloquium – New Philologies, the Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt and the Alps-Adriatic-Rectors' Conference are happy to announce the 3rd AARC PhD Students' Conference entitled: Language.Literature.Politics. 1918-2018. (Un)doing Nationalism and Resistance, to take place from Thursday, 20th to Saturday, 22nd September 2018 in Klagenfurt (Austria), at the Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt.

Although it may seem to many as a case of déjà vu, we actually bear witness to a cyclical turn of events in history. The world shortly after World War I seems very similar in many ways to the current state of affairs in the sense that another major push against multinationalism, multiculturalism, and globalism is clearly evident. Mirroring 1918 and the nationalist movements of the time, 2018 seems to bring a strong (or at least a loud) return to nationalism. After a long general movement into globalization, unification, and multiculturalism that has marked the period succeeding World War II, nationalism, particularly in the Western World, seems more pronounced today than any time in the last 70 years. It is particularly rampant in the political discourse of today. On the other hand, supranational entities such as the EU, seem to be deriving new motivation precisely from the revival of these nationalistic tendencies. A thorough look is hence needed into the languages not only of nationalisms, but also of critique and resistance to them, especially into their narrative, rhetoric, and argumentative strategies, as well as their use of metaphors, images, and other devices of communication. As environments are linguistically classified in different ways, both culturally and cognitively, understanding the various experiences that influence these classifications is crucial for us to be able to account for the different modes of the human condition expressed by language that socially constructs us. The conference thus invites contributions in all of the disciplines of linguistic, literary, and cultural analysis, and artistic installations focusing on studies of language as a vessel of negotiating nationalism in the various instantiations it can take, especially in:

- literature;
- linguistics;
- media;
- politics;
- the arts (including popular culture and visual culture);
- sports;
- and the academic world.

We particularly welcome papers or posters reflecting on topics such as:

- language and identity;
- cultural identity;
- public political discourse; social media;
- conceptual metaphors and nationalism;
- nationalism and citizenship;
- gender, sexuality and nation;

We look forward to welcoming you to an inspiring scientific exchange in a very peculiar region. The Alps-Adriatic region is gifted and haunted alike by its very special historical and sociocultural situation as the point of intersection between three language communities, various systems of beliefs and thoughts as well as economic and political experiences. It is a region characterised by experiences of generations of the local population that were able to navigate between these various linguistic, cultural, and political systems as part of their everyday lives, within and beyond existing national boundaries.

While we particularly encourage PhD students and early career researchers to submit contributions, the conference is generally open to academics and scholars of all career stages. Contributions may take the form of traditional paper presentations (20 minutes plus 10 minutes question time) or of standard poster presentations. Additionally, we are also featuring theory reading and discussion workshops (discussion groups organized around a previously set reader, particularly open to early career researchers). Extended abstracts of approximately 800 words (including a theoretical outline, the methodology employed, and the tentative results) are to be submitted as MS Word (.doc or .docx) file to aarc18@aau.at by 30th June 2018, while the notifications of acceptance will be sent out by 15th July 2018.

No conference fees apply. Additionally, we are happy to offer 15 travel (50EUR) and accommodation (40EUR) grants for PhD-Students. Selected contributions will be invited for publication in a special issue of the Open Access Journal *Colloquium - New Philologies (<http://colloquium.aau.at/>).

The official language of the conference is English. Further details to be found on the conference website: <https://conference.aau.at/event/150/>

Plenary speakers:

Dr. Alice Pechriggl: Nationalism as a Regressive Identitarian Acting out – Radical Democracy as Deliberative Action against it.

Dr. Snježana Kordić: Language and Nationalism. The Case of the Western Balkans.

Special address:

Dr. Valentin Inzko (UN High Representative for Bosnia and Herzegovina)

Conference committee:

Cristina Beretta (Department of Slavonic Studies, Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt, Austria)

Nikola Dobrić (Department of English, Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt, Austria)

Angela Fabris (Department of Romance Studies, Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt, Austria)

Thomas Hainscho (Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt, Austria)

Doris Moser (Department of German Studies, Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt, Austria)

René Schalleger (Department of English, Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt, Austria)

Mark Schreiber (Department of English, Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt, Austria)

Jürgen Struger (Department of German Studies Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt, Austria)

Peter Svetina (Department of Slavonic Studies, Alpen-Adria-Universität Klagenfurt, Austria)

Giorgio Ziffer (Department of Slavonic Studies, University of Udine, Italy)